Appomattox 4-H'ers At Camp

Two local campers were elected to top positions among the "tribes" at the annual 4-H camp, Holliday Lake, June 29-July 4. Nearly all of the eighty campers from Appomattox County are shown above. Malcolm Inge was named Big Chief; Joe Marshall, Big Scribe. A circus, talent show, and slides of English shown by Carole Ann Brooks, IFFYE visiting here, were among the week's highlights. A VPI forestry instructor created at least a small stir by catching a fox, used later in a wildlife class. Fluvanna, Albemarle, and Amherst County 4-H boys and girls also attended the camp.

...es delighted at the way the community has been involved,'' said Graham, in telling Ruritans of money and effort already devoted to the production.

He said that by the nature of a "sound-light' production, people will be here at night — they'll probably get here early, have dinner, and 'will vastly prefer to stay in Appomattox or a surrounding area. The next morning they'll need breakfast. They will need gasoline.'

"The only thing a 'sound-light' show can do,'' said Graham, 'is enhance the wealth of the community.''

'We believe that over the years people will plan to come to Appomattox. It will not be by accident, but because they make plans to come to see something wonderful, good, and memorable.'

Graham praised the "wonderful demonstration'' of financial support given by county and town officials and civic groups.
